

3

Abstract

4 A method of path selection in shared-mesh restoration networks that results in efficient use of 5 network resources, using only the network state information available locally at each network
6 element. The method uses probability theory to develop an estimate of protection channel sharing 7 opportunities and encourages sharing of protection channels if possible